Short Description

A team of professors and researchers of the Faculty of Law, Faculty of Psychology and Educational Sciences and the School of Political and Social Sciences offers training for staff of organizations assisting refugees. These training (3 days) addresses the anthropological, psychological and legal accompaniment and facilitation. The training was organized in 2015 in collaboration with la Croix Rouge and Fedasil.. A new edition will take place in 2016.

Why is this an interesting case? Is there any formal recognition of this case as a good practice? Why do you think this sample should be taken into consideration?

This training helps to educate and train professionals for a better approach to the problem (more needs-based, etc.)
